BETRAY YOUR OWN CONVICTIONS
AND FACE THE WORLD YOU'VE CREATED

The dark and dramatic series exploring all shades of grey in a fractious modern world is adapted from award-winning novel 'Germans' by prominent Russian writer, Aleksandr Terekhov. Anton Ebergard, a journalist famous for his cutting exposés on dirty public officials, is falling on hard times. His new book's selling poorly; he was thrown out of his job in a prestigious newspaper. Anton's daughter takes part in street protests and ends up behind bars. Money's scarce: the bank is pressuring Anton who's behind on his mortgage payments. To get a job as a publicity officer at a city council Anton has to go against his convictions. He warns the corrupt Mayor that the law enforcement's planning to catch him red-handed when taking a bribe.

Entering the office, the former journalist starts sinking into the dark underworld of off-the-books deals and ruthless subterfuge, losing his friends and loved ones. Each new decision takes him further away from his former principles and ideals. In the end he becomes one of the people he's spent half of his life fighting. The pressure is high, and when the blood spills Anton is torn by inner conflict. He has no nerve, nor enough opportunism to live in the world he created. The outcome is violent and tragic.

The series was produced in 2 versions: the edgy director's cut for internet streaming services and linear TV version.

Director: Stas Ivanov.

Cast: Evgeny Koryakovsky, Anna Zavtur, Anton Vasilyev, Darya Ursulyak, Valeria Lanskaya, Yulia Marchenko, Vitaly Kovalenko, Aleksey Grishin, Vladimir Ustyugov, Aleksandr Ovchinnikov.

THE MISSING

Drama, adventure, crime

2020

16x48'

Lieutenant Colonel Zorin is a top detective, a hardboiled cynical pro. After an attempted hostage release operation fails, he gets "exiled" to the missing persons department. At the start, he looks down on his new job and co-workers, including Margarita Smirnova, his boss. His relationship with the police's volunteer helpers, the Phoenix search and rescue unit, and Pasha, one of its leaders, gets off to an even worse start. It soon comes to light that Pasha is Zorin's son who refuses to have anything to do with his father. The hard road to restoring the long-dead father-son bond is one of the major narrative threads of the show. It's far from its only thread though. The series features a whole cast of characters, both from the police and the volunteer force. Each of them has their own story, and sooner or later it will unfold intertwined with an action packed and unpredictable "missing person" case. The methods used by the police and the volunteers differ. Zorin prefers old-school decisive action, arresting people and pressuring witnesses. The volunteers rely more on social media, informal communities and help freely given by sympathizing bystanders. Only by combining those old and new methods they can achieve the best result — find the missing person. The show is based on real experience of the largest volunteer search and rescue service in Russia. Every two episodes reveal a new case, a new heart-stopping search and a new result based on common effort.

Even though the 70s were a foggy, swamp-like years in the good-old USSR, the fog hid many scandals and blood-chilling crimes. This series features unique archive materials never seen before on screens, and it creates something so authentic that viewers feel like they went back in time. This is a rare glimpse in the lives of Soviet people during the total stagnation in USSR 70s history.

There's nothing stagnating about the series though. The plot moves swiftly and decisively, murders happen almost simultaneously and then the elaborate cover-up begins to unfold. First, two gruesome murders shake town. Then, a man behind the murders begins the deadly game of chess with the investigating detective. Someone with high connections, and thus, elusive, he uses all known tricks of the trade to avoid being captured. He seems to dominate the opponent, nearly crashing him. He has an upper hand through his KGB connections and friends in high places. But the justice will prevail. Through intricate setup and incredibly brave moves the investigating detective risks everything to reveal the real identity of the killer. And, we assure you, you'd never guess who it was. Made with incredible attention to every detail and spiced with great performance, this series will capture and engage any audience that digs historical thrillers.

Seasons 1-2: 36x48'

The primetime sensation quickly picked up for the second season. Made with great attention to the details, from clothes to accent to decor to every single movement the actors make, this historical gangster saga is elaborate and even kitschy at times, adding to the appeal and the period character. Take it a bit further and you'll see a battle between the old and the new - the Tsarist Russia and the Bolsheviks' order.

The story of the bloody confrontation between the new Chief of Criminal Police, a former local thief nicknamed the 'Ace', and a ruthless gangster, 'Mednik' is dramatic, very human and very deep. The audience watches in awe the transformation of an inexperienced strong-headed bully into a deeply caring, strategically thinking chief investigator and a team leader. His criminal past allows Ace to successfully navigate through the gang wars eliminating outlaws one after another. The conspiracy to overturn the Bolsheviks' regime culminates the last episodes and it's impossible to guess what will happen next. In Season 2 the battle between the old and the new - the Tsarist Russia and the Bolsheviks' order - has to continue. Ace is up against not only ruthless criminals but also Cheka - Soviet secret police - their local commander has a huge grudge against Kozyr, and he'll be seeking revenge in every possible way.

TO CATCH A SERIAL KILLER
A DETECTIVE HAS TO GO
AGAINST THE SYSTEM

Incredibly tense criminal drama about one of the most scandalous serial killer cases in USSR. From 1971 through 1985, "The Vitebsk Strangler" tortured and killed 36 women in Belorussia, the quietest and most paraded Soviet republic. Up until 1984 no one suspected the killer and only a brought-in investigator from Moscow spotted the pattern and decided to hunt the maniac. He ran into inertia, corruption and sabotage from the local cops who coerced confessions and put innocent people in jail pretending to 'solve' the case. Some were even executed while the perpetrator continued to strangle his victims. The grim and chilling story unfolds with authenticity and realism that keep the audience glued to their screens waiting for the killer to be brought to justice. Against all odds, it gets done.

Great action comedy centered on two completely opposite characters, who have to work together to solve cases. Udalov, the smart one, follows the procedure to the t, not willing to compromise or even protect his colleagues if they step outside the boundaries. The detective is a media darling and has deep knowledge of the law, with all its intricacies, making him irreplaceable member of any investigation. Razin, the strong one, believes in the power of persuasion and applies his physical strength liberally. He knows most local criminal bosses and is respected by both sides - law and crime. The interaction between two protagonists is bound to be hilarious and tense, all the time, even more so, because they both are ex-husbands of the same woman. Razin is worried about Udalov's influence on his son, while Udalov is trying to stop Razin from dating his sister. It's an unending battle of wills and wits, filmed in a humorous, realistic and charming way. Definite winner for family viewing and crimedrama fans.

That's how Seva becomes a senior investigator with the N. police department and makes Puff his aide. Seasons 1-2: 20x48'

Two orderlies work at a forensics morgue in a small town hospital: a career criminal Shishko and a former police detective Kedrov. They don't get along, but are exceedingly polite to one another in the presence of others. The only common ground between them is their job. One day a young police lieutenant Saykin comes to the morgue. People at the department consider him a loser and pawn most hopeless cases off him. Saykin joined the force seeking the thrill of the unknown, but he faints at a sign of blood and he has no idea what to do with suspects. However, after the green lieutenant witnesses Kedrov and Shishko dismantle a criminal expert's opinion with just a few well-placed questions and solve the complex murder everything changes. Saykin presents the orderlies' investigation findings as his own and finally gets much needed respect in the department. That is a start of a tumultuous and often comical partnership that helps all three characters solve one murder after another.

SING, VOTE, WIN!

Music talent show

9x120'

2021

Nine pop stars compete in this new original NTV music show. The program's structure allows for invitation of any well-known or not so famous musicians. In each episode, the participants present a song from one of 9 themes, including classic and trending hits. Judging system is unique - the contestants vote for other participants, the Eurovision way. One cannot assign points to oneself. The participant who scores the most points after 9 episodes is the winner. Participants do not drop out. In each episode, there's an extra member of the jury who does not participate in the performances. These 'dark horse' jurors could be famous pop stars, music producers or composers. At first glance, a show with such rules should be a battlefield where participants conspire against each other creating "military alliances" while the tension increases and may eventually explode. That's one way the things can go. However, our version of the show takes a completely different path. The atmosphere in the studio is light and humorous, the participants and presenters exchange friendly teases, and none of them takes the element of the competition to heart. They all have great time, and their easygoing attitude and willingness to experiment and have fun create fantastic atmosphere for everyone.

SECRET FOR A MILLION

SECRET FOR A MILLION

Game show

250x90'

14th season on air

At first look, it's just a quiz show with 10 questions about celebrities' secrets. Yet it is so much more than that. The program is deeply personal, kind and unique. It hooks the audience by making a famous person look like a regular one - with their ups and downs, mistakes and personal struggles. There is no aggression, no retelling gossips, the questions are chosen carefully and make the celebrity guest open up about their personal lives, give details that no one ever knew, and, finally, test their limits and bravery. This happens when the Secret is presented in a sealed envelope. Each truthful answer gets awarded a cash prize. The last, 10th question, is worth a million. If revealed, it will forever change the way public knows the guest. The mystery culminates in that moment - will they or won't they answer that secret question? Very few do so far. The suspense, the anticipation, the unknown - this is why viewers come back, season after season!

OLD MAN, PIKH-PIKH AND THE SEA

Release date: April 7, 2017

46'

One-of-a-kind dive into Chukotka people's lives, customs, and history. This is the land where summer temperatures rarely go above 8 degrees, kids learn how to hunt using a spear, and people are fearless and brave in the face of whales, polar bears, and freezing waters. NTV journalist Vadim Fefilov took a long trip to the Russian Far North to experience the cold Chukotka Fall and live in the nomadic reindeer herders' camps. There he met a unique man — Mikhail Zelensky. Zelensky is Russian and Polish by descent but considers himself a Chukchee and speaks their native language. This old man became Fefilov's guide to the locals' harsh daily routine and customs. During the Perestroika, he was the first businessman on Chukotka and was a three-time elected Head of the District where whale hunters live. Once again, Zelensky took a trip to tundra to visit his reindeer herder friends and then suddenly decided to ship out to hunt whales with a heavy harpoon. Vadim Fefilov followed the old man along, learned everything about the tundra life, and even got himself a new, Chukchee name.
